

Journalism-Seminar for young Journalists from Georgia, Armenia, Azerbaijan and Russia Berlin, 27. July to 04. August 2013

The role of Civil Society for the development of the state – is the Civil Society Forum of the EU Eastern Partnership of help?

(this seminar will be in English language)

Within its Eastern Partnership the European Union has created the possibility for a Civil Society Forum, comprised of NGO activists of the 6 countries and from EU countries. This step acknowledges that the importance of civil society has not only become larger, but that also decision makers in the EU have recognized this.

What is the role of civil society within the process of a changing society, within the transformation? How can the non-governmental sector help to solve problems, where the governments maybe are stuck? Is trans-national cooperation between civil-societies important? Which role can the Civil Society Forum of the EU Eastern Partnership play here?

These and further questions shall be addressed and discussed during about half of this seminar.

The other half will be comprised of sound journalistic input: about press and journalism in Germany, journalistic styles, ethics in journalism and further subjects.

While in Berlin, during the seminar, the participants are expected to complete an article covering a topic within the general field of this seminar.
